Social and Personal

Mrs. Joseph E. Bell has returned to her apartment at the Shenandoah, after an absence of several weeks from the city. Mrs. Bell has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bell, at their home in Warrenville, and a number of informal affairs were given in her honor during her visit there.

Jamestown Outing.
The annual pilgrimage of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities to Jamestown will take place to-morrow, and the steamer Pocahontas, which has been chartered to carry the association and its guests down the river, will leave the wharf promptly at 8 A. M. Among the parties of younger society people that will go to Jamestown is that chartered by Miss Sallie Deane and Mrs. Deane. The party includes Misses Isabel and Elizabeth Scott, Misses Marion and Alice Meredith, Misses Eliza Taylor, Miss Margaret Johns, Miss Marie Adkins, Miss Jane Stradwick and others.

A stop will be made at "Brandon," and the event is to be one of the most interesting social events of the season.

Alumnae Luncheon.
The Alumnae Association of Miss Ellett's School will give a luncheon in honor of the graduating class of the school on Saturday, May 24, at half-past 1 o'clock on the roof garden of the Westmoreland Club. The luncheon will be a very beautiful affair in every detail, and Miss Mary Day Winn, who is chairman of the entertainment, will be assisted by Misses Patricia Cary, Elsie Ryland, Elsie Parrish, Barbara Trigg, Mattie Purcell, Mary Aylett and Mrs. John Parrish. Miss Aylett and Miss Ryland compose the committee on decorations.

Meeting This Afternoon.
The Grandchildren Chapter, No. 1, Auxiliary to Richmond Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet this afternoon at half-past 4 o'clock at the William F. Fox School. Those children not having brought in their compositions on "Stonewall Jackson" are asked to do so at this meeting. Dr. James Power Smith will judge the papers and award the prize for the best paper at the June meeting of the chapter. Children's names and ages should be attached to all papers, as one will be considered in judging the prize award.

Of wide interest throughout the state is the following from the Washington Post of yesterday:
"The marriage of Mrs. Annie Staunton Cox to Dr. William Morgan Smith, of Alexandria, took place at the Church of St. Michael and All Angels Wednesday morning, the Rev. Patrick Murphy officiating, assisted by the Rev. Phillips, rector of St. Paul's Church, Alexandria. The ceremony was witnessed by a small party of relatives of the bride and bridegroom. Miss Marion Murphy, sister of the bride, and Judge Keith Norton, of Virginia, were the attendants. The bride wore a gown of cream satin brocade veiled in marquisette, a tulle veil and orange blossoms, and a brooch set with pearls, an heirloom in the bridegroom's family and a gift from his sister, Miss Murphy wore pale blue marquisette and carried bridesmaid roses. John Henry Murphy, brother of the bride, gave her in marriage. Alfred C. Eldridge, choir-master of St. Margaret's, presided at the organ, playing the wedding marches and giving a number of selections during the ceremony. Dr. Smith and his wife left Washington immediately after the ceremony, the latter going away in a mode-colored suit, with a hat to match. They went to Atlantic City, and will visit Dr. Smith's sister, Mrs. St. Clair Hobbs, at Pelham, N. J., before going to their home in Alexandria."

For Mrs. Robinson.
Mrs. H. C. Huntley will entertain at cards this evening at her home in Roanoke in honor of Mrs. Charles Robinson, of this city. Mrs. Robinson went to Roanoke last week to visit Mrs. Huntley, and a number of entertainments have been planned in her honor. Mrs. Huntley will also have as guests of honor this evening at her card party, Mrs. E. L. Landrum, of Lynchburg, and Mrs. E. T. Carpenter, of High Point, N. C.

Society people in Richmond are much interested in Bell Day, which is held annually by the board of managers of the Virginia Home for Incapacities. To-day is Bell Day and a committee of well-known women, assisted by numbers of pretty girls, will have charge of the various stations placed all over the city.

Back From Motor Trip.
A party of Richmond people motored to Blackstone last Saturday afternoon, the party including Mr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Hefley, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Kisey, Miss Ada M. Hefley, George H. Heiser, Misses Beulah and Lillian Heiser and Edna Hefley. In Blackstone they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hefley at their home, and on Sunday afternoon they left for Crewe, where they were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. George B. Corrie at the Oliver Hotel, returning to Richmond Monday night.

Ben J. Potter has gone to New York, where he will attend the annual meeting of the American Guild of Organists. Mr. and Mrs. Potter have moved to Forest Hill, where they expect to spend the summer months, returning to Richmond some time late in the fall.

Miss Willie Anna Vial, of Hanover, and James E. Strozler, of Macon, Ga., were married at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. J. A. Tully, 1636 North Twenty-third Street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. J. Williams, and witnessed only by the immediate family. Shortly after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Strozler left for Macon, the home of the groom's parents. From there they will go on an extended Northern tour, after which they will make their home in Rutherford, N. J., where the groom is engaged in business.

Miss Fannie Miller left last week to spend two weeks visiting friends in New York City.

Mrs. Harriet Woodrow Welles has returned to her home in Denver, Col., after a visit to the White House in Washington.

Miss Cally Woody, who has been the guest of her sister, at Arvonla, is now stopping with relatives in Barton Heights.

Mrs. J. C. Scott, Miss Josie Scott and Miss Ethel Blanton left Wednesday to spend some time in New York and Philadelphia.

Mrs. Lewis Pilcher is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Jones, at "Elmhurst," near Fredericksburg.

Mrs. Herbert R. Scott and Miss Ruth Haxall Scott are guests of Mrs. Wilton Boteler, in Washington.

Miss Nancy Patton, who has been quite sick at her home in West Franklin Street for the past two weeks, is now slowly improving.

Mrs. Stewart Woodward, who has been visiting in Staunton, is now the guest of friends in Luray.

Mrs. E. S. Blanton has returned to her home in Newport News, after spending some time with relatives here.

Mrs. E. C. Goodall, who has been the guest of relatives in this city, has returned to Staunton.

Mrs. J. E. White, of this city, is the guest of Mrs. James Jernigan at her home in Newport News this week.

A. Langstaff Johnston, Jr., has returned from a visit of several days to friends in New York and Schenectady.

Alex Williams, of Arvonla, is spending some time in this city, where he is staying for medical treatment.

THRONE OF ALBANIA FOR COL. ROOSEVELT

Nothing So Astonishing in Fact That Former President's Name Is Mentioned.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.
ALTHOUGH the project of offering the throne of Albania to Theodore Roosevelt, reported in the dispatches from Europe, has been treated by people here in the light of a good joke, there is nothing, after all, so astonishing in the fact that his name should have been mentioned in connection with the rulership of the newly-formed independent state of Albania.

Beliefs of royalty are not the only persons to whom thrones have been offered by nations searching for orderly government. Thus before the election of the late King George to the crown of Greece in 1863 it was tendered to the fourteenth Earl of Derby, grandfather of the present peer of that ilk, and was declined by that famous statesman on the plea that he would rather be an English peer of ancient lineage and great wealth than a foreign monarch.

The throne of Belgium, too, was offered in 1830 by the Belgians on their emancipation from Dutch rule, to the Prince de Ligne, a mere nobleman, and it was only when he declined it that it was tendered to and accepted by the royal prince who reigned as King Leopold I.

Theodore Roosevelt has proved, as President of the United States, his ability as an administrator and his name is familiar to the people throughout the length and breadth of Albania, thanks to the large number of Albanians who have lived in America, and who have relatives on this side of the Atlantic.

Then, too, Americans have shown their talent for administration in foreign countries. Thus General William C. Proctor, who after a distinguished service during the Civil War in the Army of the Potomac, commanded the Khedivial troops in the Sudan during the reign of Ismail, was a very successful and popular Governor of one of the Sudan provinces of Khedive Ismail was the late Colonel Alexander Macomb Mason, grandson of that Major-General Alexander Macomb who died as general-in-chief of the United States Army. Mason was one of the finest types of Americans in the employ of foreign governments that it has even been my lot to meet. After taking part as a naval officer in the Civil War, he was active service in China before being engaged by Khedive Ismail, who after a time assigned him to assist General Gordon, of whom he became the closest friend. What specially endeared him to "China" Gordon, of Khartoum, was his singular modesty, his disarming modesty, his ability to hold his tongue. Mason was the most quiet and unassuming of men. People knew him for months and years, and were in almost daily intercourse with him, before learning, and then only through others, of his splendid record in the Sudan, where he made the first survey of the Albert Nyanza.

Now that the suit for the throne of Albania, against a London paper for imputing to him responsibility for the sensational theft of the jewels of the Order of St. Patrick, is bringing that mysterious scandal once more upon the tapis, it may be safely recalled the fact that Professor Goldwin Smith, in his "Fishes and Irish Character," furnishes an odd clue to the extraordinary indifference manifested by Augustine Birrell, the Irish Secretary, and by the present Anghuith government, in general, regarding the missing jewels. For the professors book contains the following letter, written by the first Duke of Wellington, who, as Sir Arthur Wellesley, was Secretary for Ireland from 1807 to 1809. He writes as follows:

"I have settled the business of the Chancellor of the Order of St. Patrick. He will have literally the copper collars, for they are of copper. W., the father of—, embezzled the money which had been given for the medals, above all his ability, and had them made of copper-gilt instead."

There is no record of these gift-copper insignia of the Order of St. Patrick ever having been superseded by real gold ones, and it is, therefore, not only possible, but even probable, that most of the missing insignia of the Order of St. Patrick were of gilt-copper, with the exception of the star of the grand master, which was stated to contain some very handsome brilliant stones, given for the purpose by George IV. But if, on the authority of the great Duke of Wellington, the remainder of the insignia was of gilt-copper, what guarantee is there that the brilliant adorning the star of the grand master were not of paste? It would go far towards explaining the apparent indifference displayed by the authorities towards the recovery of the missing insignia. In fact, the indifference has been so marked, and the fact has been to such an extent disguised, that the impression has been gained that the government is not particularly anxious to regain the insignia, since then the fact that they were of no particular intrinsic value, would be brought to light.

It will be curious to see whether Sir Arthur Vickers carries his libel suit to completion. For his own sake, it is desirable that he should do so, since, removed from his office consequent upon the theft of the insignia, he has remained ever since under a cloud, being denied any opportunity of vindicating himself. As Ulster king at arms and chief of the Heraldic Department of Ireland, and as such principal director of all Irish state ceremonies, he was the custodian of the insignia of the order.

Captain Neville Wilkins, now held by the law of the Earl of Pembroke, has been in existence since its creation, in 1652, by Edward VI., who appointed a certain Bartholomew Butler by royal letters patent to "undertake the care of arms and to be of service to all good men, at home and abroad."

Ulster possesses a greater degree of authority than Garter king at arms, in London. For whereas the latter is subordinate to the Duke of Norfolk, who, as hereditary earl marshal, is head of the Royal College of Heralds in London, Ulster in his own sphere is supreme, and responsible only to the crown. Another point of difference is that whereas the Royal College of Heralds in London is only a semi-official corporation, holding office by virtue of a royal charter, the Irish office of Ulster king at arms is a government department.

Ulster's predecessor was Sir Bernard Burke, who was celebrated from one end of Europe to the other as one of the most eminent and at the same time complaisant of genealogists, and he remains on record as the author and originator of "Burke's Peerage," now a standard work of reference. Sir Arthur Vickers in the same way has been the editor for years of "Loose's Peerage," a volume which nowadays has acquired quite as much prestige as Burke's. Sir Arthur is president and one of the founders of the Kildare Archeological Society, and also of that quaint body of collectors, the Ex-Libris Society, who make the gathering of book-plates their special hobby. He is still a member of the Kildare Club, in Dublin, and a son of the late Colonel Vickers, who commanded the Sixty-first Regiment of the British army.

Ulster king at arms is the permanent office of the Order of St. Patrick, and his seal of office is necessary to give legal value to patents of Irish peerages, and to the appointment to the Order of St. Patrick. His offices are situated in Dublin Castle, under the Bedford Tower, in the upper quadrangle, immediately above the principal entrance to the viceregal apartments, and is one of the more modern of the group of buildings which go to make up the castle, although it dates from the beginning of the reign of the Georges, that is to say, 200 years ago. It was from the tower in those offices in the Bedford Tower that the insignia were stolen.

MRS. ALICE M. TYLER HAS PASSED AWAY

Literary Editor of The Times-Dispatch Dies After Illness of One Week.

FUNERAL THIS AFTERNOON

Loved by a Multitude of Children for Weekly Page Created in Their Behalf.

Mrs. Alice M. Tyler, literary editor of The Times-Dispatch, and one of the best known women in Richmond and Virginia, died at her home, 301 East Franklin Street, yesterday morning at 8:15 o'clock after an illness of one week.

For the past few days her relatives and friends had given up all hope, although she rallied at times and in her conscious moments showed slight improvement. She was about sixty years old.

The funeral will be conducted from her home this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock. The service, which will be private, will be made at Woodlawn, in Loudoun County.

Following are the pall-bearers: William Gray, James Branch Cabell, Ben B. Valentine, S. B. Woodfin, Richard Riley, W. Y. Davis, P. F. Tallaferro, J. St. George Bryan.

The news of Mrs. Tyler's death will bring sorrow to a wide circle of friends and to countless readers of The Times-Dispatch, who had come to know her through her writings. For more than ten years her contributions had been a regular feature of the Sunday paper. She was particularly interested in the history of the ante-bellum days and had found a permanent place in many Virginia libraries.

It was as editor of the Children's Department of The Times-Dispatch, however, that Mrs. Tyler gained her greatest following. She was the founder of The Times-Dispatch Children's Club, an entirely new and popular paper making in Virginia, and through the correspondence which bound the members together became the foster-mother of thousands of young girls. She was also the author of a book, "The Children of the Old South," which has been brought to her weekly in the children's trials and attainments. The children of the two States will mourn to-day for their kindly editor this is no more.

Real Service to Children.
Throughout her work as editor of the Children's Department she was inspired with an unselfish desire to perfect the paper, for the young readers of the paper, she recognized instinctively each one of the thousands of little letters mailed to her, and never failed to print or write a message of encouragement to those of her growing family who stood in need of it. Sooner or later every child's letter was printed—every drawing, no matter how crude, was reproduced over the pages of the paper.

In addition to the department for children, Mrs. Tyler formerly conducted for The Times-Dispatch the woman's department and the society page. Her columns were characterized by a keen insight into the art of criticism and were often reprinted by publishers' journals as models of their kind.

As her literary and newspaper activities, Mrs. Tyler added a deep interest in the work of making a historical, civic and Confederate associations of the city. Her affiliation with these brought her a wide circle of acquaintance in Richmond. She was at the time of her death, headquarters secretary of the Equal Suffrage League of Virginia, and among the pioneers of the Virginia movement for the enfranchisement of women. For some time Mrs. Tyler was secretary of the Association for the preservation of Virginia Antiquities. While in that office she was active in the movement which resulted in acquiring the John Marshall House by the association.

Long Educational Work.
Mrs. Tyler was the daughter of James M. Trice, of Woodlawn, Loudoun County, and was married in 1876 to John Marshall Tyler. She is survived by one brother, Captain R. A. Trice, of Loudoun County, and two sisters, Mrs. R. T. Hunter, of 215 East Franklin Street, this city, and Mrs. N. M. Sibert, of Concord, N. C.

Upon the death of her husband, Mrs. Tyler took up educational work, in which she was engaged until she came to The Times-Dispatch. She taught first at the female school in Abbeville, S. C., and was later assistant principal of a school in Anniston, Ala. Her next charge was at San Antonio, Tex., where she was principal of the Episcopal School. She gave up teaching for a period to take a post-graduate course at Vassar College, and was at one time professor of the preparatory department at the University of Arkansas.

The coming of the Equal Suffrage League of Virginia were closed yesterday out of respect to Mrs. Tyler, whose usual weekly meeting was cancelled.

STATE JEWELERS MEET AT ROANOKE

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Roanoke, Va., May 15.—The sixth annual convention of the Virginia Retail Jewelers Association was called to order to-day in the assembly hall of the Chamber of Commerce. With President Henry Silverthorn presiding.

Mayor Moomaw delivered an address of welcome to the visiting jewelers, which was responded to by President Silverthorn. At the conclusion of his address regular business was taken up and the reports of the president, secretary and treasurer were heard and referred to the proper committees.

President Silverthorn appointed a resolutions committee as follows: O. F. Russell, E. P. Titmus and Fred Konler.

To-night the visitors were held this afternoon, and at 5 o'clock a reception of the association were given an automobile tour through the city and surrounding country.

A banquet at Rockledge Inn, on Mill Mountain. The convention will be in session through to-morrow. Among those attending are R. J. Matter, South Hill; W. D. Martin, Farmville; H. W. Tobal, Tazewell; A. F. Jahnke, Jr., Richmond; J. S. James, Richmond; J. F. Kohler, Richmond; D. E. Lumsden, Richmond; A. F. Russell, W. Green, H. L. Boring, M. Harrison, J. P. Henneberry, A. S. Pfeuffer, of Roanoke; Henry Silverthorn, Lynchburg; Staunton Pilcher, Petersburg; T. A. James, Petersburg; E. H. Titmus, Petersburg; and George E. Filippin, Lynchburg, and others.

DECORATE GRAVES OF SOLDIER DEAD

Annual Confederate Memorial Day Exercises Held at Fredericksburg.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Fredericksburg, Va., May 15.—The annual Confederate memorial exercises were observed here to-day, it being the time fixed by the Ladies' Memorial Association of Fredericksburg. A large number of citizens, a large proportion being women and children, assembled at a public square at the courthouse at 5 o'clock this afternoon and marched in a procession to the Confederate Cemetery. The procession was in charge of R. Innis Taylor, chief marshal, and was headed by a brass band from Washington.

In the procession were the Washington Guards, Maury Camp, Confederate Veterans, Daughters of the Confederacy, Sons of Confederate Soldiers, children and citizens on foot in carriages. Judge John T. Goodrich, Rev. R. C. Gilmore, Rev. J. R. Jacobs and the women of the Memorial Association, of which Mr. Goodrich is president. Arriving at the cemetery the large crowd assembled around the Confederate monument, where the gathering was called to order by Judge John T. Goodrich, who presided.

The exercises of opening prayer by Rev. R. C. Gilmore; selections by the band; singing of the hymns, "Rock of Ages," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee"; children's chorus, "Bonny Blue Flag," directed by Mrs. L. L. Coghill; quartet, "Brave Heart Sleep On"—Mrs. A. P. Rowe, Mrs. Charles Koeppe, Mrs. Charles Hassell, H. K. Sweetser; choruses by the Normal School students, directed by Miss Margaret Fraser; benediction, Rev. J. R. Jacobs; taps. Following the exercises all of the graves of the Confederate dead were beautifully decorated with flowers, while the band rendered Southern melodies.

J. Willard Adams, of this city, has gone to Atlanta, Ga., as a representative of the East-Henry Trust, to the Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and will remain during the sessions of ten days.

Work has been started on the new permanent road in Spotsylvania County, recently authorized by a bond issue of $100,000. The work is being done by a force of convicts in charge of J. A. Pendleton, foreman, and under the supervision of the board of public roads of Spotsylvania in conjunction with a representative of the office of State Highway Commissioner at Richmond. When this work is completed Spotsylvania will have as finely constructed roads as any county in the State.

To-day's Beauty Recipes

By Mme. D'Milla.

"Women desire superfluous hair on the face and forearms because it gives them a masculine appearance and detracts from the feminine charm. To remove superfluous hair cover the surface with a paste made by mixing a little powdered talc with water; leave on two minutes, wipe off with a soft cloth, and the hair will be gone."

"Aches and pains cause the face to contract, giving wrinkles. Mother's Salve, which can be bought in every drug store, relieves the face of such pains, and gives it a smooth, white, soft and lovely appearance."

"The springtime is the season of youth, when every girl wishes to look her very best. For a complexion of lilies and roses, apply each morning a solution of lemon juice and water, or a package of mayonaise in a half pint of water, which corrects blotched, pimply skin, and gives it a healthy glow. The skin smooth, white, soft and lovely."

"A shampoo that merely washes the hair is not enough. The parasites that cause falling, dull, faded and brittle hair must be removed. Mother's Shampoo, which leaves the scalp in a condition to encourage the growth of hair. It prevents baldness and makes the hair glossy, fluffy and fine."
